INTRODUCTION

The purpose of the South Dakota Department of Social Services' Division of Child Protection Services is to work together to bring safety, permanency and well-being to families to build a better tomorrow.

Child Protection Services protects children who are at risk of abuse or neglect while making every effort to keep families intact. Child Protection Services also offers referrals for counseling for families, training for adoptive or foster parents, and licensing services for child welfare agencies.

Our staff believes respect, integrity, teamwork and accountability are the core values of the division. Our commitment to these values will guide our thoughts and actions as helpers, colleagues and employees. These core values are understood, accepted and to be applied by all Child Protection Services' staff.

PROTECTIVE SERVICES

State law requires doctors, mental health professionals, social workers, counselors, child care providers, hospital and school personnel, law enforcement officers, parole or court services officers, religious healing practitioners, domestic abuse shelter employees or volunteers, coroners or any safety-sensitive position as defined in subdivision 23-3-64 (2) to report child abuse. Failure by a mandatory reporter to report child abuse or neglect is a misdemeanor.

Anyone who has reasonable cause to suspect that a person under age 18 has been abused or neglected may make a report. The report is made to the Department of Social Services, law enforcement or the state's attorney. Child Protection Services and law enforcement agencies are required by law to investigate reports of child abuse or neglect. Any person who knows or suspects that a child has been physically or emotionally injured, neglected or sexually abused should report it immediately.

Protective services are provided for children and their parents in situations where children are unsafe because of abuse and neglect. It includes intake and screening of referrals of child abuse and neglect involving families who have a caretaking responsibility for children. Referrals are assigned for an initial family assessment.

SPECIAL NEEDS ADOPTION

Special needs adoption is a legal process that unites children who have special needs with adoptive parents. Children considered for special needs adoption may be physically, mentally or emotionally handicapped. These children are primarily victims of abuse and neglect, and parental rights have been terminated. They are usually over age eight, part of a sibling group or a minority group.

LICENSING

South Dakota law requires child welfare agencies to be licensed. These agencies include family foster homes, residential treatment centers, group care centers for minors, independent living preparation programs, maternity homes and child placement agencies. Licensing is intended to ensure that agencies maintain minimum standards of care and do not present children with any further threat of abuse or neglect. The department trains prospective foster and adoptive parents to become placement resources for children who are either temporarily or permanently unable to live in their own homes. This training is a group process known as Parents Resource for Information, Development and Education (PRIDE). The program involves 30 hours of training and includes a home study process and home consultations.

An initial family assessment is a neutral approach to gathering information in response to a report of suspected child abuse or neglect. Information is gathered through interviews, observations and reviewing documents. It also includes making a determination as to the validity of the allegations in the report, determining whether or not there are any other abuse or neglect issues, making a determination as to the immediate safety and needs of the child, and determining risk to the child through identification of family/child strengths and stresses.

If it is determined the child is unsafe or is at risk of abuse or neglect, a Child Protection Services' Family Services Specialist will develop a case plan with the parents to improve the situation. Normally, a child would not be removed from the home. However, if a child appears to be in immediate danger, a judge may order removal of the child from the situation or a law enforcement officer may take protective custody.

Child Protection Services does not have the authority to take custody of a child. If parents succeed in making improvements, court action may not be necessary. In severe cases, the state's attorney may initiate a criminal proceeding.

Support and home-based services

are also available to families in which children are at risk of abuse or neglect. Support services include training for families in parenting skills and home management. These services also provide referrals for counseling and other assistance.

PLACEMENT SERVICES

If children are removed from their homes to ensure their safety, the state must place them in a temporary or permanent home where they will be safe and well cared for. The following placement services are available.

Kinship placement provides a child with 24-hour temporary care and supervision by a relative while permanent plans are developed.

Foster care provides a child with 24-hour temporary care and supervision in a licensed foster home while parents and social workers try to resolve the family's problems.

Group care provides 24-hour service for children with family and interpersonal conflicts. They may be unable to tolerate a family setting or they may require ongoing counseling in a structured program using community-based resources.

Subsidized guardianship provides financial assistance to a legal guardian who provides permanent care for a child.

Residential treatment provides 24-hour services for children who have behavioral or emotional problems requiring intensive professional assistance and therapy in a highly structured, self-contained environment.
